“ My dad, Norman, faced many challenges during his lifetime. His father, Joseph, came to the US as an immigrant from Canada. They were very poor and yet respected by their community. Dad married and had 5 children, and though he was not formally educated, he provided for his family who never went without what they needed. As an elderly man he took care of a wife with Alzheimer's disease and a mentally and physically handicapped adult son. His indomitable spirit and love will live on. The hardest challenge I have had in this life, yet, is learning how to live without him. I have faith he is in a special place and think of him each and every day. With love, from Maryellen, your Marie Elena.

“ My Uncle Norman was a sweet and gentle soul. I have so many lovely memories of spending the night with my Daigneault cousins. What I most admired and respected about Uncle Norman was his devotion to his son Mark who, like my own daughter Allison, lived with cerebral palsy. It takes a special kind of love to raise a child with a disability, and Uncle Norman had that in spades. I am so comforted in knowing that I visited my Uncle Norman every time I came back to my hometown from Florida. Our last visit was in August 2019. The pandemic kept me away from Adams for a couple of years. My deepest condolences go to the Daigneault family and all of his extended family and friends. May you dance with Aunt Laurel when you see her.
With my deepest sympathy,
Wendy Smith Brennan
