He was a longtime member of the Adams Lions Club, and was awarded Lion International's highest honor for service to the community, the Melvin Jones Award, just last year. He was also a incorporator of Adams Community Bank. He enjoyed cars, puttering around the house, spending time with his grandchildren, and especially enjoyed the Saturday night family dinners held for many years at his home.

“ Dick was one of the nicest guys in the pool industry and I am proud to be able to have been able to work with him over my last 30 years in the pool business. My deepest sympathy goes out to everyone in his family. Dick was a great man who will be sadly missed by many people. Heaven just got themselves one special angel.

“ *I was sorry to hear of Dick's death. I bought my first car from Dick, a 1963 split back window Corvette Stingray back in 1965, just as my brother Pete had done before me (a 1957). The thing about Dick was that he not only would find you the car you were looking for, but he was honest and he was 'cool'. That's right always got you what you wanted, right deal, but also he was a cool dude. So 40 years later when I wanted a jetted tub, guess who I went to, Dick of course, still had the best product, was honest and still 'cool'. What a legacy he left behind.
My love and thoughts to his caring family.
